

Gabriele Iannàccaro is currently Full Professor of Linguistics at the University of Milano-Bicocca. He has previously taught in several Italian and European Universities (lately at Stockholms universitet). Visiting professor in European and Asian Universities. Founder and co-director of the Centre d'Études Linguistiques pour l'Europe. Co-coordinator of various large-scale sociolinguistic surveys in a number of European minority communities, sponsored by regional institutions and by the European Union. Appointed by various local governments as a consultant on language policy and language planning issues; coordinator of an official survey of Italian Ministry of Education on schools providing language teaching in minority codes.

Research interests: Sociolinguistics, Contact Linguistics, Dialectology, Perceptual Linguistics, Language Planning, Historical Indo-European Linguistics, Writing systems theory. Organiser of a number of International congresses and meetings. He is author of 10 monographs, about 130 scientific papers and editor of many volumes.